A LIFE OF USEFULNESS

Elder William Stanley An Octogenarian.

Rev. William Stanley and wife, of Shelbyville, father of Hon. A. O. Stanley, Democratic nominee for Governor of Kentucky, are here and are spending a week at Mrs. Hurl's. Mr. Stanley left Versailles 33 years ago, at which time he was pastor of the Versailles Christian church. His many old friends were delighted to see him. He has had a very remarkable life. He grew up a farmer boy, became a lawyer, went to Kansas before the war, where he became the captain of a noted company of state guards and took part in putting down some very serious riots. He was a candidate for Circuit Judge when the war broke out, came back to Kentucky and enlisted in Morgan's cavalry, afterwards became a member of the Orphan Brigade, then for two years was assistant Judge Advocate General of the army. He entered the ministry after the war. Mr. Stanley is 80 years of age and looks very much younger, in spite of his patriarchal beard. His wife is a first cousin of the late Col. John F. Davis, father of Geo. T. Davis.—Woodford Sun.

No Guide Book Authorized

Secretary Chamber of Commerce, Richmond, Kentucky.

Dear Sir:

For the protection of your merchants and members of your Organization, The Dixie Highway Association wishes to advise you that this Association has not authorized any individual or concern to issue a Guide Book of the Dixie Highway. We feel that it would be manifestly unfair to the touring public, the advertiser and to this association to publish such a Guide at this time. Although practically every county is at work, or has the money in hand to build its section of the Dixie Highway, a Guide Book inviting tourists to travel over the Dixie Highway before next year, would result in the highway receiving a serious set back. It is impossible for the present, to give an accurate routing of the Dixie Highway, owing to the fact that there are several questions of routing to be decided by the commissioners appointed by the Governors of the various states. When the Directors feel that the time has arrived, when such a Guide Book, which will contain only official and accurate information regarding the Highway and the territory through which it traverses can be issued so that it will be of real service to the tourist and not merely an advertising scheme published for private gain, an official Guide, compiled by the Dixie Highway Association's own accredited representatives, will be published.

Won't you kindly have your local papers give publicity to this matter, in the interest of the Dixie Highway movement?

Very truly yours,
The Dixie Highway Association
V. D. L. Robinson
Asst. Sec'y.

WEEKLY WAR REVIEW

The fall of Brest-Litovsk, the pivotal point in the Russian second line of defense, was among the features of the week in the eastern zone of operations. Since the reduction of Warsaw, the big fortresses have fallen into the hands of the German allies, including Novogorodsk, Kovno and Orla. The armies of Grand Duke Nicholas are reported to be conducting an orderly retreat, but are being closely pursued by the Teutons. Grodno and Vilna are menaced and will likely be surrendered under a struggle. Thousands of Russians troops have been made prisoners.

Possibility of the Germans reaching Petrograd is being discussed. The conclusion is arrived at that unless the Germans succeed in obtaining possession of the Gulf of Riga, they are not likely to hazard an attempt to reach Petrograd, especially as autumn is now approaching, when the country lying between the Dvina and Narva presents almost insuperable obstacles.

Fighting continues on the western front and at the Dardanelles without appreciable gain to either side. On the Italian front snowstorms have hampered operations in the mountains. Activity of German submarines in British waters was responsible for the sinking of a dozen or more merchant vessels, with some loss of lives.

Through Ambassador Von Bernstorff Berlin has let it be known that Germany will give "complete satisfaction" to the United States if it develops that the commander of the German submarine exceeded his instructions in attacking the White Star liner Arabic. The Germans contend that the attack on the Arabic was not an unfriendly act against the United States. This intelligence proved gratifying to American government officials, who now anticipate an amicable settlement of the submarine controversy. It was learned that the Kaiser's government is not going to make concessions without expecting something in return. This government stands committed to co-operate with Germany for the maintenance of the freedom of the seas. Germany intends to hold the United States strictly to the letter of this pledge, and when she yields to this government on the submarine issue and gives guarantees as to the future she will expect that the United States will make good its word and proceed against Great Britain with a view to ending the alleged violations of international law against which the United States has complained in connection with the British blockade of Germany.

ITALIANS DROP BOMBS

Wreck the Austrian Aviation Base Near Trieste.

Rome, Aug. 30.—Italian aviators have completely wrecked the Austrian aviation base at Divassa, east of Trieste, according to the official statement of the war office. All of the Italian aeroplanes returned safely. The military authorities have ordered compulsory cholera vaccination for all men and officers in both the army and navy, and proceeded against Great Britain who had been moved from the Gallian front to the Italian front have recently been made prisoners, and there has been some fear that they might bring the disease with them.

It is reported that General Rostag has been seriously wounded while leading a successful attack against Austrian positions.

Pope Benedict visited incognito the wounded soldiers in the Santa Marta hospital, adjoining the Vatican. The pope was visibly moved as he walked among the many beds, stopping to speak to some of the men. He took notes and distributed money.

British Steamer Torpedoed.

London, Aug. 27.—The British steamship Windsor, 6,055 tons, has been sunk by a German submarine. Her crew was rescued by the Norwegian steamer Haver, and her cargo was transferred to the New Zealand liner Rumeria. The Windsor hailed from London.

RUSS RETREAT IS UNCHECKED

Germans Continue to Press Their Advantage.

TRANSPORT LOSS DENIED

Reported Loss of 1,000 Canadian Soldiers When Germans Sunk Transport Is Denied by Toronto Officials—Bombardments on French Front.

Ottawa, Aug. 30.—The report that a Canadian troop transport had been sunk off the Scilly islands is officially denied here. It is said that not since the end of July has a transport left Canada with more than three hundred men aboard and all of the transports sailing previous to Aug. 15 have reached their destination safely.

London, Aug. 30.—The German armies are continuing their offensive in Russia with vigor and with apparently no indication of any intention on their part to stop.

The German official statement published at Berlin speaks of advances of varying importance on the entire line south of Kovno.

Perhaps the most important of these is that made by the army group under Prince Leopold of Bavaria. These troops are now marching through the Bialowoz forest, well to the east of the Brest-Litovsk and Bialostok railway, and on the outskirts of the forest one wing of the army is nearing Scherschewsk, thirty miles east of the railway and sixty miles northeast of Brest-Litovsk.

Father south the armies under Field Marshal von Mackensen are meeting with but little resistance, according to the German war office and are advancing apparently even into the swampy region which is so extensive in the district lying south of the Prypet.

It had been expected here that the great Bialowoz forest and the Prypet marshes would serve as a natural barrier against the German advance behind which the Russians might take shelter. Such, however, does not seem from the wording of the Berlin statement to be the case.

Pierce hand to hand fighting for the possession of the excavations left by mine explosions occurred at Marie Therese and west of the forest of Malmcourt. The French troops, having first gained a footing in these excavations, retained possession of them in spite of the numerous German attacks.

Everywhere on the French front there were heavy bombardments at various points. The French communiqué follows:

"There was the usual activity on the part of artillery along the major part of the front. Particularly effective bombardments of the enemy's positions occurred in the north, the sector of Hettas and Steenstraete in the region of Chaules, north of the Aisne, in the environs of Allies, at Courcours, in Champagne, north of the Chalons camp and between the Mause and the Moselle in the neighborhood of Vannes, Evreux and the Mortagne wood."

The following official statement was given out by the Italian war office:

"Details of our success in the Strina valley show that the enemy suffered severe losses, leaving in our hands a great quantity of machine guns, ammunition, and sixteen cases of bombs. An important force of the enemy at Saccarant and Pozzi Alta suffered heavy loss, some guns being destroyed and those remaining being transferred to other positions outside the defence works, from where they still reply to our fire."

SIX HELD IN BOMB PLOTS

Accused of Theft and Arson on Ships Belonging to Allies.

New York, Aug. 30.—Additional arrests and more serious charges than grand larceny are anticipated in the next few days as a result of the police bomb squads investigation and arrest of six persons, charged with plotting to blow up ships belonging to the allies. Information in the hands of Deputy Commissioner Guy Seal and Captain Thomas Tunney leads them to believe that many others besides the seven men now under arrest are involved in the alleged conspiracy. Detectors, disguised as longshoremen, now have under surveillance checkers and weighers in the employ of the steamship companies, whose vessels caught fire.

Of the six men who were arrested five were officers of lighters and barges which carried sugar to the steamships, and a second-hand furniture dealer and one other, a checker on the French line pier, were each held in $3,000 bail.

It has been determined that approximately $75,000 to $100,000 worth of sugar was stolen and that perhaps a larger amount was damaged by fire.

Panic Caused by Earthquake.

Rome, Aug. 30.—In the Avezzano district violent earthquakes shocks during the last twenty-four hours caused a great panic. The new anti-seismic dwellings which were erected after the recent earthquake prevented a repetition of that disaster.

Date Changed.

SEE PEACE MOVE IN NEW POLICY

Believe Germany Paving Way For War's End.

U. S. A. POSSIBLE MEDIATOR

Successful Mediation of Blockade Differences Between England and Germany Now Would Make America Mediator to End War.

Washington, Aug. 30.—That Germany's change of policy toward the submarine issue has a larger purpose than the mere maintenance of friendly relations with this government, is the view of some officials in Washington.

Viewed by these officials and in diplomatic circles here Germany is moving to rehabilitate herself in the eyes of neutrals, so that when a movement for peace is actually undertaken, she may be assured of a larger measure of sympathy and support from neutral powers than would be accorded to her now.

They believe that Germany, if not actually seeking to pave the way for peace negotiations, is, at least, preparing herself for the day when such negotiations will be begun.

The view of Germany is looking forward to possible peace developments from a settlement of the submarine issue is not mere surmise or speculation. It has a very substantial foundation in suggestions that have repeatedly been made by German representatives in this country. Ever since the submarine issue became acute they have urged informally upon Washington officials the great chance for a step in the direction of peace if the United States only could successfully mediate the submarine and blockade differences between Germany and England. It has been their contention that such an important step would probably prove to be a beginning, and that the way would then be open for the United States to make the peace plan, which has been reviewed in German circles here. Again the possibility of the president serving as a leader in the movement for peace is being held out.

But not only will a settlement of the submarine controversy, in the opinion of Washington officials, make the president more available from the German viewpoint, but it will also afford him an opportunity to demonstrate to the world the absolutely impartial stand of the United States as a neutral.

It was learned here on high authority that the president will only make a move to speedily against Great Britain's violations against the rights of Americans on the high seas, but also in the direction of a settlement of the Mexican situation as soon as the German issue has been settled. The controversy with Germany is being handled on a million-dollar scale by the Washington administration for the last five months. The president and his advisers have hesitated to push the issue with England so long as they were confronted with the likelihood of an open break with Germany. Also it is believed and expected now that the threatening situation with the Kaiser's government has deterred this government from moving as speedily as it desired in the Mexican situation.

Now the president's advisers are promising special action both Great Britain and Mexico as soon as the submarine troubles have cleared.

Now the president's advisers are promising special action both Great Britain and Mexico as soon as the submarine troubles have cleared.

ELIHU ALLEN CONVICTED

Indicted For Killing of Grover Blanton In Primary Fight.

Jackson, Ky. (Special): The jury in the Greathitt circuit court sitting in the case of Elihu Allen, charged with killing Grover Blanton, a theatrical man of Quicksand, the county, on Aug. 7, in a primary election fight, returned a verdict of guilty and fixed his punishment at imprisonment for life. Allen's attorneys at once announced that they would appeal the case on the grounds of an improper denial of a change of venue and also that the defendant had been rushed into trial.

Mart Clemmons also was killed and Allen himself slightly wounded during the election fight. Allen's trial has been one of the most interesting ever held in this county, because of the standing of the Blanton family.

ASK FOR NEW AMENDMENT

Provides That State Superintendent May Succeed Himself.

Frankfort, Ky. (Special): A bill submitting to the people of the state an amendment to the Constitution permitting the state superintendent of public instruction to succeed himself in office will be introduced into the 1916 legislature by Representative T. R. Jones of Calloway county.

Representative Jones was here and said he was of the opinion that the schools of the state might be greatly improved if a superintendent were permitted to succeed himself in office. Mr. Jones is principal of the Murray high school, and represented Calloway county in the last legislature and was re-nominated in the primary.

Mr. Jones said that the bill he proposed to introduce will have the backing of school men.

Loot From Postoffice.

Famous Incident Being Recalled.

A writer in World's Work recalls a notable incident of the Spanish-American War which may have escaped the memory of most Americans. Its republication seems timely in view of the present somewhat strained relations between Germany and the United States. The article is in part as follows:

"Early in May, 1898, Admiral Dewey's fleet sailed in Manila Bay, beat the 'paniards', and established a blockade. Soon afterwards two English cruisers, a French cruiser, and a Japanese cruiser appeared and willingly complied with the very reasonable regulations that the admiral laid down to them. A day or two later a German cruiser, the Irene, appeared. She ignored the American flag and dropped anchor where she chose. Admiral Dewey overlooked the incident as due to carelessness or ignorance. Next morning another German ship, the

A VIOLATION OF LAW.

Many owners of automobiles in this city violate the law with impunity. A great many of them seem to be speed crazy and drive through the streets as if they were on a speedway. They act as if pedestrians and others had no rights upon our streets and they alone had the right of way. A great number cut around the corners and never give any warning of their approach. Some go speeding over streets at night without lights, and very few automobiles have rear lights, which the law provides for. Now, we are not knockers and fault-finders, but simply call the attention of the officers to the flagrant violation of the law governing motor vehicles.

The noise made by these machines near the churches during services is a nuisance and should be abated. Of course no one does this purposely. But can't it be cut out entirely?

TOLERANCE.

Tolerance has been defined as "the capacity of endurance." It presupposes defects and faults. Reduced to its last analysis, it is the application of the Golden Rule. If everyone were perfect, there would be such deadly perfection in the world that it would be unbearable. We would all be alike—exactly alike. We love our fellow man because he approaches our ideal of perfection—because of his efforts to rise above his downward inclinations. No two men think exactly alike, but each may be honest in his convictions. The other man's conclusions should be respected, even though he differs from us, for we may be wrong. No man should be made to suffer, because he does not think as we do, whether it is of religion, politics or morals. Intolerance is the basis of the boycott, and the boycott is despicable. Religion and politics are the right and left hands of intolerance. They have arrayed father against son and son against brother. They have brought on murders and wars. If improperly used they are the greatest barriers to civilization, just as they are the greatest aids to progress if based on tolerance. Tolerance fosters friendship; intolerance begets hatred. Tolerance makes for calm consideration; intolerance brings revolution. Tolerance creates statesmen; intolerance is the mother of tyrants. Tolerance forgets self and considers the other man; intolerance is the glorification of the Ego.

Buzzard Steals Wife.

Last Friday, Lawrence Buzzard was arrested in Harrodsburg on the charge of stealing another man's wife, the charge being proffered by J. H. Lantz, a large land owner, of Doanstown, Va. Buzzard and the woman came to Harrodsburg about five months ago, the woman bringing with her two children. She bought a house and lot and she and Buzzard established a nest. Lantz says he will prosecute Buzzard in the Federal Court under the Mann White Slave Act.

Big Plant.

Approximately $300,000 will be invested by the Kentucky River Power Co., Hazard, Ky., for its electric plant to transmit electricity throughout the coal-mining district of Hazard. This company was recently organized and has its main office at Hazard, with R. L. Cornell as general manager and engineer in charge. Its plant building will be constructed of reinforced concrete and steel, while its electrical transmission system will extend 15 miles and cost $25,000. About 5,000 horse power will be developed.

Good Record

Rev. E. G. B. Mann, presiding elder of the Maysville district, M. E. Church, South, has made a good record during the four years he has presided over the district. He has attended 240 quarterly meetings; 30 revivals; preached 1,400 sermons; converted 1,270 persons; traveled 26,000 miles; dedicated 80 new churches; delegate to the Ecumenical Methodist Conference held in Toronto, Canada, October, 1911; delegate to the General Conference of the Church, Oklahoma City, May, 1911. Besides all this, Dr. Mann has served as editor-in-chief and business manager of the Central Methodist Advocate, and has delivered a number of addresses and lectures at colleges, camp meetings, etc., that are not included in the summary already given. Dr. Mann has resided in Lexington during the past four years and has greatly endeared himself to the people of that city. He is one of the ablest preachers in the Kentucky Conference and big of both heart and brain. He is beloved by all denominations—in fact, admired by all men. Dr. Mann is well and favorably known to our people and has many friends in this city.

Thirty-three Years.

Middlesboro—The embalmed bodies of Isaac and Rebecca Thomas, which have rested in metal coffins with transparent tops for thirty-three years, have been opened in modern steel vaults and permanently locked. The bodies have remained in a good state of preservation until recently, when signs of decay became apparent and it was decided to place the coffins in the heavy vaults. Relatives viewed the bodies annually.

Little Miss Virginia Bates a Winner.

The Better Babies Contest was an interesting feature of the first day of the Fair, as was evidenced by the number of mothers who brought their little ones for examination. The Pierian Club wishes to thank Doctors Gilbert, Billard, Lyon, Kavanaugh and Toll for their interest and assistance in this scientific movement. We deeply appreciate the unselfishness of these busy men who so willingly gave their valuable services in the interest of child welfare. The table of standards on the Better Babies score card provides for the examination of babies from 12 to 36 months, and the following babies received the highest score:

Most perfect boy from 12 to 24 months, Lee Ashby Jacobs; 98.

Most perfect girl from 12 to 24 months, Virginia Bates; 93.

Most perfect boy from 24 to 36 months, Forest Baker; 90 1-8.

Most perfect girl from 24 to 36 months, Dorothy Martin; 93 3-4.

Ten dollars is divided between the four winners and the mothers can get it by calling at the Secretary's office, at the Fair, on Friday. The babies' score cards will be left at the Public Library for the mothers who wish to keep them.—Lawrenceburg News.

Little Miss Virginia Bates is a granddaughter of Mrs. Marguerite Bates, of this county.

All kinds of Insurance can be obtained Breck & Evans.

Improvements in Popular Store.

Quite extensive improvements are being made to the dry goods store of Mr. J. H. Keller, on Main street, and when completed will present an appearance equal to that of any city store. A large and commodious oak balcony is being erected which is calculated to furnish ample space for a large and intelligent display of ladies' suits, cloaks, etc. An adequate portion of the balcony is cut off as the office of this concern and a cashier's system will be installed. The second floor of the building is also undergoing various improvements and which will be used as the carpet and rug department. Mr. Keller is now in the Eastern cities buying large stocks for his store and in his absence the business is being looked after by his brother, Mr. Joseph Keller.—Mt. Sterling Sentinel-Democrat.

We are glad to hear of Mr. Keller's success. He is a Richmond boy and straight as a string. For thirteen years he was connected with Mr. E. V. Elder, one of our leading dry goods merchants, and his numerous friends in this community will rejoice to hear of his merited success.

To Protect Game.

Owners of land in Clark county have started a movement which will practically put an end to hunting as far as that county is concerned for at least five years. Game of all descriptions has almost become extinct, and in order to get another start it will be made into one large game preserve. The move was started by farmers and sportsmen of Clark, and the State authorities are taking no part in it. It is the intention of those interested to have every one post his farm and not permit any hunting for five years, and a petition is being circulated asking all the farmers to co-operate in the work. So far a large number have signed, and the territory pledged embraces farms running from the Mt. Sterling to the Colbyville pike, and no hunting will be permitted on them.

Big Land Prices

L. B. Reed, of this county, purchased of Mrs. W. V. Featherstone, of Scott county, her farm lying on the North Middletown and Plum Lick pike, containing 50 acres, for $103.50 per acre.—Bourbon News.

E. L. Lillard, of Versailles, has sold his farm on the Frankfort and Lexington pike near Midway, to Andrew Hawkins, of Lawrenceburg, for $138.50 an acre. The place contains 297 1-4 acres, has an eight-room brick residence, also three barns and out-buildings. It is estimated that this farm has about half a million tons of phosphate.

Peach Crop

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 27.—For the movement of the Georgia peach crop to Eastern markets during the season extending from May 27 to August 17, Southern Railway operated 187 special trains from Atlanta to Potomac Yard on fast passenger schedules handling 3936 cars, of which 3574, or 90 3 percent, made perfect schedule and delivered to connections in time to make market on the date due.

Big Baptising.

One of the most interesting meetings in the history of Shawnee Run church closed this week. Rev. Dew, the evangelist, who assisted the pastor, Rev. Moore is a man of earnest and simple speaking who sent the gospel message straight home to the hearts of his hearers. Sixty-two persons, who had joined during the revival, were immersed at the Baptist church in this city Wednesday with most impressive services. A large congregation, many of whom were from the Shawnee Run section, were present at the service.—Harrodsburg Herald.

Postmasters Wanted

The Post Office Department at Washington has notified Congressman Helm that the inspector sent to Garrard county has failed to find suitable applicants for the position of postmaster at Buck-eyes, Coy, Marksburg and Flatwood, and that each and all of these offices will be discontinued at an early day unless reliable persons come forward and are willing to assume the duties of postmasters at said points. If the offices are discontinued they will be supplied by the carriers on rural routes established and about to be established.—Lancaster Record.

Citizens Indignant.

The citizens of Shelbyville are very indignant over the plans for the proposed new Federal building for that city, which it is said will possess "neither beauty nor dignity." The building proposed for Shelbyville is a plain structure, and the people of that thriving little city think and believe they are entitled to something far better than the Federal government proposes to give them. The building would contribute nothing to the appearance of the city. At a joint meeting of the Board of Council and Business Men's Association, a unanimous report [disapproving the plans] was sent to Washington on the first of last month. The same committee will confer with Congressman Helm as to the steps necessary to secure the alterations desired in the specifications and an increased appropriation, if that should be required.

If you can spare it, we will appreciate that dollar

Little Difference.

Last week the Harrodsburg Herald got things slightly mixed. It inadvertently got the "Death" headline over the "Marriage" column, and ran off most of its edition before discovering the mistake. Having gone so far they would not stop the press to correct the error. However, there is little difference between marriage and death when we take an inventory of our stock of life. We once heard a fellow say that a man never experienced two happy days in life. The first, the day he got married; second, the day his wife died. When a young man is in love and wants to marry, he is near death; and finally when the marriage vow is solemnized, ere long he only wishes he had died. After all, there is little difference.

The Booster's Crown

I never wrote a famous play Like those that Shakespeare wrote, Nor yet in verse or roundelay Struck the Miltonic note; I never painted anything Like Michaelangelo, Nor does my oratory ring Like that of Cicero. Upon the stage I must confess I'm not a second Pooch, Nor do I pretend to dress Like Beau Brummel in truth; No symphonies have composed To rival Herr Mozart, Nor nature's secrets have disclosed With Luther Burbank's art. No continents have I explored Like Ponce de Leon, Nor never led the conquering horde, As did Napoleon; No master of finance am I, As Rockefeller is; In science I'd not qualify With the late Agassiz. At statesmanship I must admit I'm a Talleyrand; On no inventions have I hit With Edison's command; Yet on my tomb let all men read My one claim to renown. That mine was not a knocker's creed— He Boosted His Home Town.

DEATHS

Mr. William Ballew, who resides on East Irvine street, this city, died at the Pattie A. Clay Infirmary, Friday evening at 7 o'clock, after a brief illness of typhoid fever. Deceased was sixty-four years of age and had lived in Richmond a number of years, being recognized as one of our oldest residents. His wife preceded him to the grave several years since. Mr. Ballew was a generous and kind-hearted man, and his death comes as a severe shock to his numerous relatives and friends. He is survived by five children, two brothers and four sisters, all of whom have the deepest sympathy of everyone in the community in their hour of deep sorrow. Funeral services were conducted at his late home Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, Rev. O. J. Young paying a beautiful and graceful tribute to the departed dead. At the conclusion of the service his remains were laid to rest beside his wife in the Richmond Cemetery.

The people of this community were sadly shocked Monday morning when news reached here from Nicholasville conveying the intelligence of the sudden death of Mr. William R. Powell in that city Sunday evening. Sunday morning Mr. Powell and his wife, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. John McMeekin, of Lexington, motored from Nicholasville to Stanford, where they spent the day with friends. The party on its return trip left Stanford after supper, and while homeward bound Mr. Powell became stricken with acute indigestion and had a convulsion. His wife and friends became greatly alarmed over his condition, telephoned for a physician to be on hand upon their arrival and rushed him to Nicholasville. Upon reaching that city he had another convulsion and died before his relatives could put him to bed in his home.

The news came to Mr. Powell's relatives and friends in this city as a severe shock, as everybody believed he was enjoying the best of health and prosperity. Deceased was about forty years of age and was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Powell, of this county. He was a young man of sterling qualities and great business ability. For eleven years he was connected with the dry goods store of E. V. Elder, of this city. After severing his connection with Mr. Elder about seven years ago, he went to Nicholasville where he embarked in business for himself, and at the time of his death had the most up-to-date dry goods and ladies' ready-to-wear store in that city and enjoyed a large and increasing patronage.

Mr. Powell was a young man possessing rare traits of character. Honest in his dealings and upright in all things, he commanded the respect of the people and numbered his friends by his acquaintances. He was a member of the Elks, Knights of Pythias and Red Men's lodges. He is survived by his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Olive Wilds, a charming young woman of Nicholasville, his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Powell, of this county; Mrs. Quinn Covington, of College Hill, and Mrs. James Lewis, of Winchester, all of whom have the deepest sympathy of a legion of friends in their great sorrow. Funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock, after which his remains were laid to rest "beneath a wilderness of flowers" in the cemetery at Nicholasville.

Church Notes

Dr. B. C. Horton preached his last sermon of the Conference year at the M. E. Church, South, Sunday night and left Monday for Millersburg to attend the annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which convened in that city Tuesday morning. Since coming here Dr. Horton has made many friends and greatly endeared himself to our people. He is a scholar and thorough christian gentleman, and his many friends of all denominations, trust he will be returned to Richmond.

Rev. R. L. Telford will resume his regular services at the Presbyterian church Sunday.

Rev. E. B. Barnes closed a very successful meeting at Macedonia, Fayette county, last week with 24 additions. The constant rains interfered with the attendance the first week, but great audiences were present the closing days. Miss Ruth added much to the services, singing solos on several occasions.

Rev. E. B. Barnes will preach next Sunday morning and evening. We hope all our members and friends will be present and help us make this an auspicious beginning of our fall and winter services.

Bro. Cristopherson and Browning are holding special services at Union spent Monday in town.

A Coincidence

There were appointed on last Saturday for the office of Circuit Judge, five men who were born in Magoffin county, three of whom were born in the same voting precinct.

They are as follows: D. W. Gardner, dem., and A. T. Patrick, rep., in the Magoffin-Pleasant Knox judicial district; M. M. Redwine, dem., in the 32d district; J. Frank Bailey, rep., in the Johnson-Martin district and Jas. P. Adams, rep., in the Lee-Breathitt-Estill Wolfe district.—West Liberty Courier.

Lost Barn

Mr. Clarence Green, who lives near Cartersville, had the misfortune to lose his barn and several hundred dollars worth of corn. He lost it last week the result of a stroke of lightning. He lost all his farming implements, 200 bushels of wheat, two hundred bales of hay and other provender. His loss is about $2,000, with only $500 insurance. On the same day Ed and Jim Smith lost two horses by lightning.—Lancaster Record.

Mrs. Cecil Jones, of Baldwin, while using the chopper to cut off the head of a chicken, had the misfortune to cut off the middle finger of the left hand. She is suffering much pain, but no complications are feared.

Malignant diphtheria is raging in Frankfort and Franklin county, having been the cause of the death of four children within the last few days. The county health officer of Franklin county has ordered all churches and schools in the county closed and every means to stay the further spread of the disease will be employed.

Prof. R. G. Stott has been in Terre Haute, Ind., the guest of his sister, Mrs.
Clarke R. Parker and has delivered his inimitable lecture, "Some birds I would like to shoot." He delighted his audience and the Star of that city gives him an elaborate write up.

Prof. Stott goes from there to Evansville, Ind., where he will deliver a series of educational lectures.

Judge Riddle

Without in any way committing The Times to any particular politics or man or men it wants to say, and will say, that while Circuit Judges, like men mentioned in Tennyson's Brook, will come and go, no man of pleasant disposition or more affable manners will occupy the judgeship in this district or,
for that matter, in any other district.—

Champion Brood Sow.

Mr. John H. Gibson, who resides near this city, possibly has the champion brood sow of America. She is a young Duroc Jersey and had fifteen pigs the first litter; seventeen the second, and last Friday night had fifteen more. Out of the first and second litters she raised twenty-four, and the third third fair for a dozen more. Mr. Gibson prizes her highly, and says he would like to hear from the man who has one that can beat her. We believe this would be hard to do.

The Cattle Market

Local cattle buyers have bought several hundred head of fine export cattle
during the past week at $8 per hundred.
A large number of smaller cattle have also changed hands at $7 to $7.50 per hundred. Good yearling have been selling at $7.50. The market has been quite active at these figures. The hog market has been active and several car loads of good ones were shipped to the Cincinnati markets during the week.

Gets Consent By Phone.

Mr. Elijah Davidson, a prominent young man of Irvine, Miss Parsons, a petite young lady of Paris, bent on getting married, arrived in this city last Wednesday and took the necessary steps to have the nuptial knot tied.
Owing to the age of the young lady County Clerk Terrill refused to issue the license. Her parents at Paris were called over the phone and after some dickering gave their consent, the license was then issued and the pair were married at the court house forthwith. They returned to Irvine, Thursday.

The Nicholasville Fair.

The fourteenth annual exhibition of the Knights of Pythias Fair was a success. The three days attendance averaged well with last year, and there is every evidence that the K. of P's will, when the books are closed, have a nice sum to their credit. The rings were well filled and the exhibits good.
The floral hall was thronged with visitors, and the poultry show attracted much attention. Storms Military Band furnished excellent music. The ladies of the Presbyterian church at Wilmore had charge of the dining room and served good meals.—Jessamine Journal.

To Try Again.

Colonel W. P. Walton is preparing to resume the Lexingtonian, which he suspended a short time ago to make as he says, "a wild goose chase after the phantasma of office" and expects to be in use in a week or two. A sadder and he hopes a wiser man, he says, he will be able to get out a much better paper than before and help to elect others to office that was denied him and for which he will run "never again." The paper is soon to be issued semi-weekly and as soon as possible appear as a low priced daily, Colonel Walton said.

THE DEMOCRATS

Of Madison County Held Mass Convention Saturday and Selected Delegates to State Convention

The Democrats of Madison County met in mass convention at the court house Saturday at 1 o'clock p. m., and selected delegates to the State Convention at Louisville, Aug. 31. Hon. L. B.
Herrington, was chairman of the meeting, and Mr. T. H. Pickels was chosen secretary. Mr. Joe Boggs offered the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

Be It Resolved, By the Democrats of Madison county in mass convention assembled, at the court house in said county, this 28th day of August, 1915:

1.—That we approve of the call made for this convention by the constituted authority of the Democratic party on August 14, 1915, for the purpose of adopting and promulgating a platform of principles for the guidance of the Democratic officers and of the party in Kentucky.

2.—That we congratulate the Democracy of Kentucky on the selections of its standard bearers for the November election, led by that great statesman and friend of the people, Hon. A. O.
Stanley, and we predict a magnificent victory for the nominees of the party.

3.—That we endorse the present State Administration and take pride in its progress and constructive work.

4.—That we endorse the National Administration and commend the wise and patriotic course pursued by our honored President, the Hon. Woodrow Wilson.

5.—That the following named delegates be and they are hereby appointed to represent Madison county at the State Convention to be held in Louisville, Kentucky, August 31, 1915; and that said delegates go to said convention instructed and that they vote as a unit on all propositions.

Belue & Co.'s Branch Store.
Messrs. B. E. Belue & Co., the enterprising millinery and ready-to-wear people of East Main street, have this week opened a branch store in Winchester.
Both Mr. and Mrs. Belue give their attention to business and with the aid of such efficient help as Mrs. Carson and Miss Proctor and others are well equipped to take care of both stores. Buying in larger quantities as they will now do, they secure lower prices, better discounts, etc., and intend to give their customers the benefit of such reductions.
At both of their stores they are now receiving daily the latest and most up-to-date Fall styles.

A Splendid School.

In this issue appears the announcement of Prof. W. E. Gwynne's Private Preparatory School for boys. The school opens on September 16, which will be the sixth year. This is one of the best preparatory schools in Central Kentucky and should be liberally patronized by our people. Prof. Gwynne is an instructor of rare ability and a gentleman in every sense the word expresses or implies. It is not necessary to send your boy away from home in order to prepare him for college. You can do it cheaper and better right here in your midst than elsewhere. All students under the tutelage of Prof. Gwynne can enter State University, Georgetown College and Virginia Military Institute without examination. Make your arrangements to send your boy to Prof.
Gwynne the coming year, and thereby give him the best possible training.

Caldwell Opens.

The Caldwell High School opened Monday, under favorable auspices. Among the visitors were Messrs. Z. T. Rice, A. M. Davidson, and Ed. Blanton of the school board. Messrs. Mary and Willie Traynor and Rev. E. B. Barnes, who conducted the opening exercises.

Election Commissioners.

Hon. C. O. Wallace, of this city, has been chosen as the Republican Election Commissioner for Madison county, while Deputy County Clerk, Jennings Maupin, has been selected as the Democratic Commissioner. Both are high-toned gentlemen and this selection should be eminently satisfactory to all parties.

Celebrated Sixtieth Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Fish, of Paint Lick, celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary at their home Sunday. Mr.
and Mrs. Fish were married sixty years ago in Rockcastle county, but have resided in Madison county for the past forty years. To this happy union eleven children were born, but four have passed through the Valley of Death.
The seven who survive and were in attendance Sunday are: Mr. W. S. Fish, of Stanford; Dr. C. A. Fish, of Franfort;
Mr. E. T. Fish, of Berea; Mr. L. J.
Fish, of Paint Lick; Mrs. Mary Gallows, of Frankfort; Mrs. Joe Mason and Mrs. Fannie Garrett, of Richmond. The popular couple are both hale and hearty despite their advanced years. Mr.
Fish is eighty-five and is spry as a man of forty, riding a saddle horse everywhere he desires to go. Mrs. Fish is seventy-five and well preserved. The aged couple received many beautiful gifts and were the recipients of heartfelt congratulations and good wishes from a host of friends throughout the State.

In Society

Mr. and Mrs. J. Taylor White entertained Wednesday with a picnic party in honor of Mr. Mrs. S. R. Eubank, of Winchester, and Miss Martha White, of Philadelphia, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Adams entertained informally at dinner Thursday Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Eubank, of Winchester, and Miss Martha White, of Philadelphia, Pa., who are the guests of their mother, Mrs.
Brutus White, in the county.

There was a call meeting of the Woman's Club on Monday afternoon at the Club Rooms at which time Mrs. Chas. A.
Keith was unanimously elected president, and Mrs. Sallie Yates McKee, Secretary. A finer choice could hardly have been made. Mrs. Keith is a capable woman and under her leadership a very successful year is predicted. Mrs. McKee, who formerly served as Secretary is equally efficient and popular.

Miss Nannie B. Myers entertained for her guest yesterday afternoon with a lovely card party from three until five.

Mrs. H. B. Hanger was hostess at a beautiful appointed luncheon on Friday last, in honor of Mrs. Robert R. Mason and daughter, Virginia, of Hamilton Roads, Va. Covers were laid for twelve.
Among those present were: Mrs. French
Hage and daughter, of Frankfort; Mrs.
Silas Mason, of Lexington; Mrs. Weaver, of Nashville, Tenn., and Mrs.
Henry Bosworth, of Lexington.

On Tuesday morning Mrs. Harvey Chenault entertained with several tables of 500
in honor of Miss Eugenia Hume.

Miss Martha Allen was hostess of a beautifully appointed dance on Saturday evening complimentary to Mr. Wilson Warick, of Lebanon. The hours were from eight to twelve and at intermission a lovely luncheon was served at the Happy Hour Tea Room. Clyde and Mitchell furnished the music.

A delightful social session was held at the Elks Club rooms last Friday evening,
when Mr. Chas. Powell, of DeLand, Fla., acted as host to a large number of his brother Elks. Mr. Powell is one of the charter members of the local lodge, and has always taken an active interest in the work of the order. His hospitality of Friday night will long be remembered by his brethren of the antlered tribe who were present.

Mrs. Rhodes Shackelford charmingly entertained a number of her friends at cards at her home on West Main street, Thursday afternoon, in honor of her guest, Mrs.
Hancock, of Paris.

Mrs. Laura Blanton was the charming hostess of a theatre party on Monday night, when about twenty young people enjoyed the movies at the Grand Opera House, in honor of Miss Eugenia Hume, of Louisville.
After the show the party was served with delicious refreshments at the Happy Hour Tea Room.

Tuesday night Mrs. L. B. Herrington entertained a number of young people with a party at the Opera House. After enjoying the splendid pictures, the party proceeded to the Happy Hour Tea Room, where an elaborate lunch was served.

Miss Margaret Miller is visiting Mrs.
John Buster, in Harrodsburg.

Judge John C. Chenault, was in Jackson the past week on legal business.

Hon. J. Smith Hays, of Winchester, was here on business last Saturday.

Miss Mary Joseph James has returned from a delightful visit to friends at Lawrenceburg.

Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Phelps have returned from a most enjoyable trip through Virginia, stopping at Lynchburg, Roanoke and other points.

Miss Zella Rice is visiting Miss Elizabeth Thomas in Shelbyville.

Mr. Pat Brown, of the J. W. Zaring
Grain & Milling Company, spent Saturday and Sunday at his home in Shelbyville.

Mr. Dobrowsky, a prominent young merchant of Nicholasville, spent several days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Dobrowsky, in this city.

Mrs. D. W. Vandever and children spent the last week with Mrs. L. Clark in Cincinnati.

Mrs. William Perkins and Miss Fay
Price, have returned home after a visit to Mrs. H. C. Anderson at Stanford.

Miss Mary Miller, of Richmond, is the guest of the Misses White on Broadway.
—Danville Advocate.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Williams, of Paris, spent Sunday with Judge and Mrs. N. B.
Turpin on East Main street.

Mr. H. P. Reid joined his wife and daughter here Saturday. Mrs. Reid and daughter have been visiting relatives and friends in this community for several days.
They returned to their home in Mt. Sterling, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Stanifer, spent a few days with relatives in London last week.

Dr. W. G. White, of the Climax-Madi-sonian, is in Louisville attending the Democratic State Convention. Although his choice was defeated in the primary, he is a loyal and hearty supporter of Mr. Stanley, the nominee.

Miss Violet McCreary, of Indianapolis, Ind., arrived Tuesday to take charge of the military department at E. V. Elder's store. This is the fourth season for this charming young lady at this store, and her many friends gladly welcome her.

Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Parrish visited friends at Athens last week.

Mrs. E. B. Barnes and children visited
Mr. and Mrs. Jake Graves at Chilesburg
last week.

Mrs. Newman, of Knoxville, Tenn., is visiting her mother, Mrs. Z. G. Cobb.

Master Lynn Boggs, John Hurley and
Robert Neff attended the Nicholasville Fair. Robert's chickens won one blue and three reds. The boys report a big crowd and a fine time.

Miss Elizabeth Hagan who has been quite sick at her home in Burnamwood, is improving.

Miss Louise Tallentire has returned to her home in Indianapolis, Ind., after a pleasant visit to Miss Katherine Maupin.

Master Richard and Jerome Hunt, of St.
Louis, Mo., are visiting John Parkes Parish and Mrs. Cantrill Maupin.

Mr. Curtis Bennett leaves this week to enter Cornell University.

Mrs. James M. Poyntz and Miss Kathleen Poyntz reach home today after spending the summer at Lake Chautauqua.

Rev. and Mrs. William Stanley come today to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs.
Jake Collins. Mr. Stanley is one of our oldest and best known ministers and the father of Hon. A. O. Stanley. He, with his charming wife, will be cordially welcomed.

Miss Otie B. Hagin, of Rose Hill, Va., will be the guest of Miss Dorcas Francis this week.

Mrs. Nora S. Perkins and little daughter, Evelyn, have returned from an extended visit with friends in Chicago and Cincinnati.

SEEING LIFE with JOHN HENRY & George V. Hobart

John Henry On the Rubes of New York

SAY! did you ever put on your things and go out hunting for an apartment on little old Manhattan island?

It's a Gentle Pastime—take it from Uncle Hank!

As you grow more familiar with the Mysteries of the Game you see what a fatal mistake you made in not being born rich, and as your faltering feet take you from one Palatial Bungalow to another you berate the Destiny which failed to make you a hotel clerk in Sharon, Pa., or a soda water operator in Dawson, W. Va.

Peaches, having tired of hotel life, began to murmur incoherently from time to time about "a sweet little nest of our own."

A nest, indeed! I had a friend once who built a nest in an uptown apartment house and three months later a strange bird flew in and eloped with his wife. So six on the nest.

Friend wife was insistent, however, so finally we set forth in quest of a haven of rest where we should no longer be at the mercy of tip-sodden waiters and money-mad bell hops.

Letting go of the life line, we swam out into the upper reaches of Broadway in search of a Renting Agency and were soon beyond hope of rescue.

Over there on our port bow loomed largely and fascinating entrance to Webb & Spider's, and like a million other frys we fell for it.

Assuming that air of languid indifference which is popularly supposed to indicate excessive moneyed interests, we gave the high sign to a gold-braided functionary at the entrance and eased ourselves into the silver-plated cavern where they take your measure for an apartment.

The Renting Agency of Webb & Spider was the velvet goods—take it from an eagle-eyed oglooker! Adorning the walls were paintings the like of which Rembrandt or Corot would have been proud of—if sufficiently intoxicated. Mahogany and plate glass did team work all over the shop and the soft murmur of thrash-throated typewriters gave an atmosphere of refinement befitting a place where money is painlessly extracted.

We were wading through a carpet with plush up to our ankles when suddenly appeared in our pathway one Sydney D'Brie, the lad with a map like a cow—the original, Brother of the Ox.

No doubt you know lots of people who always smile and look conscious when accused of having Bovine Eyes, but did you ever catch the fellow with a whole face like a cow?

Sydney D'Brie was the answer. Every time Syd looked at me I thought of the Beef Trust and shuddered.

"We Turned and Ran Like a Couple of Jack Rabbits on the Way Home to Dinner."

Syd was one of the ushers at our wedding and this day I don't know why I ever let that human Hamburger steak be an usher. He couldn't ush for sour pickles. All he could do was to put his face where I could see it and let tired Nature do the rest.

And here he was again, dancing gleefully back into our lives and gibbering like a gink with an unbuttoned brain.

"Well, well!" Syd chortled. "Isn't this a surprise, though! John Henry and Peaches! HERE! Looking for an apartment, eh?"

"No, Syd," I came back, after shaking a limp mitt; "no, we were playing golf up Broadway and I happened to slice a ball through the ventilator; so we came in after it!"

Syd bellowed joyously: "Ha, ha! Same old John Henry! Gee I'm glad to see you. Want an apartment, don't you? How high you want to go?"

"Not above the sixth floor," I answered.

"Oh, I don't mean that—how high?" Syd asked.

"Well, not above 110th Street," I ventured.

"You don't get me," Syd complained. "I mean the price—how high you want to go in price?"

"Oh!" I said; "something reasonable."

"How would $6,000 strike you?" Syd inquired.

"It would strike me below the belt," I told him. "I said we wanted something reasonable."

"Well," Syd chuckled, "six thousand a year is reasonable nowadays. We have apartments ranging all the way from $5,000 up to $30,000 a year."

"You may keep all with my compliments, Syd," I informed him. "What I'm looking for is a place to live in, not a hand-painted cabaret in which to entertain the Sheriff. I don't wish to pick up bargains in real estate."

Syd, how do you manage to rent an apartment when the formula is the same as buying an issue of City Bonds?"

"Cinch!" Syd gurgled brothly. "You can sell anything to the Rubes in New York."

"Rubes in New York!" Peaches and I echoed.

"Surest thing you know," Syd beamed on; "there are more Rubes in New York than in all the rural districts tied together. Who is it rides up town on the Subway in the evening with a strange man standing on each one of his insteps—the Rubes!"

Who is it pays eight dollars for a pair of seats and enables the ticket speculator to pick up bargains in real estate—the Rubes! Who is it pays sixty cents a dozen for cold storage eggs so the Grocer can send his family to a Sprudel Spa—the Rubes! And who has boosted the price on apartments so high that only those with a private Mint can squeeze through the gilded portals—the Rubes with the coin!"

Syd looked around cautiously to see if the Flat Wheel of the Concern was listening.

"Take it from me, John," he went on, "the Rubes with a Bundle of Dough is the answer to a lot of questions right here in this price-laden burg. The High Cost of Living is due to the prevalence of Rubes who have the wherewithal to Live High at any old Cost."

Then Syd took a long breath and whispered: "We call only to Rubes with the cash. There's enough of them cutting off coupons around New York to make $18,000 apartments possible. And what do they get for it—ha, ha!—silver-plated plumbing, gold buttons on the elevator boy and a lot of conceited laughter from the man who built the house. Do you honestly think, John, you could drape yourself around an apartment with sufficient energy to get $18,000 worth of enjoyment out of it in a year? Nix, old squalls. You may be slightly bacolic in temperament, but you're no Rubes; so take my tip and beat it from this district where every lighted window is a sign that money is burning furiously around."

I take back all I said about Syd D'Brie. He's a busy boy with the gab, but there's something in what he says. And if his face is like a cow it's a cow it is.

Bidding Syd an affectionate farewell we tiptoed out of the Rubes' Retreat and went forth into the jungle alone.

Peaches soon discovered an assortment of sandstone and mortar which wagged its tail when you called Gladiolus Court; so we went in to take a look around.

"Gladiolus Court" was very select, the janitor told us. Then he showed us through a collection of five horse stalls on the sixth floor. When I asked him if he knew any place around there large enough to hold a table and two chairs he had a blowout in a perfectly good tire.

The janitor told us there were only three dark rooms and when I told him that three out of five took the record away from England, I thought he'd bite me.

Our next guess was a tall, blonde building with a fricassee of iron around the front of it.

It was called The Gushworth Arms

by those who cared to mention it at all. The janitor was made up to look like a sea lion, but he had the softest voice I ever heard. It sounded like the rattle of pulverized sugar falling in a bowl of oatmeal.

He offered us seven rooms and a bath on the fifth floor, but when we got up there somebody had mislaid three of the rooms and the bath, after hearing the janitor say so many times what he charged for the apartment, had shrunk to a foot tub; so we went seditly away from there.

Then with bowed heads and hearts from which hope was preparing to flee, we entered a conning tower through a stained glass porthole.

It was called The Belladonna—because it was good for sore eyes.

An abrupt person with a drooping mustache met us about the quarter-deck and began to mention large sums of money commencing with $4,000 a year and going on up till he bit his tongue.

We merely swallowed our palates and fell back two paces to the rear.

When the abrupt person paused for a moment at "a duplex for $14,000 a year" we turned and ran like a couple of jack rabbits on the way home to dinner.

Two blocks away we fell under the spell of a shack called the Psychedoza. A Cuban refugee met us at the door and dared us to come in.

We were offered an apartment on the eleventh floor which had never

"Cinch!" Syd gurgled brothly. "You can sell anything to the Rubes in New York."

"Rubes in New York!" Peaches and I echoed.

"Surest thing you know," Syd beamed on; "there are more Rubes in New York than in all the rural districts tied together. Who is it rides up town on the Subway in the evening with a strange man standing on each one of his insteps—the Rubes!"

Who is it pays eight dollars for a pair of seats and enables the ticket speculator to pick up bargains in real estate—the Rubes! Who is it pays sixty cents a dozen for cold storage eggs so the Grocer can send his family to a Sprudel Spa—the Rubes! And who has boosted the price on apartments so high that only those with a private Mint can squeeze through the gilded portals—the Rubes with the coin!"

Syd looked around cautiously to see if the Flat Wheel of the Concern was listening.

"Take it from me, John," he went on, "the Rubes with a Bundle of Dough is the answer to a lot of questions right here in this price-laden burg. The High Cost of Living is due to the prevalence of Rubes who have the wherewithal to Live High at any old Cost."

Then Syd took a long breath and whispered: "We call only to Rubes with the cash. There's enough of them cutting off coupons around New York to make $18,000 apartments possible. And what do they get for it—ha, ha!—silver-plated plumbing, gold buttons on the elevator boy and a lot of conceited laughter from the man who built the house. Do you honestly think, John, you could drape yourself around an apartment with sufficient energy to get $18,000 worth of enjoyment out of it in a year? Nix, old squalls. You may be slightly bacolic in temperament, but you're no Rubes; so take my tip and beat it from this district where every lighted window is a sign that money is burning furiously around."

I take back all I said about Syd D'Brie. He's a busy boy with the gab, but there's something in what he says. And if his face is like a cow it's a cow it is.

Bidding Syd an affectionate farewell we tiptoed out of the Rubes' Retreat and went forth into the jungle alone.

Peaches soon discovered an assortment of sandstone and mortar which wagged its tail when you called Gladiolus Court; so we went in to take a look around.

"Gladiolus Court" was very select, the janitor told us. Then he showed us through a collection of five horse stalls on the sixth floor. When I asked him if he knew any place around there large enough to hold a table and two chairs he had a blowout in a perfectly good tire.

The janitor told us there were only three dark rooms and when I told him that three out of five took the record away from England, I thought he'd bite me.

Our next guess was a tall, blonde building with a fricassee of iron around the front of it.

It was called The Gushworth Arms

by those who cared to mention it at all. The janitor was made up to look like a sea lion, but he had the softest voice I ever heard. It sounded like the rattle of pulverized sugar falling in a bowl of oatmeal.

He offered us seven rooms and a bath on the fifth floor, but when we got up there somebody had mislaid three of the rooms and the bath, after hearing the janitor say so many times what he charged for the apartment, had shrunk to a foot tub; so we went seditly away from there.

Then with bowed heads and hearts from which hope was preparing to flee, we entered a conning tower through a stained glass porthole.

It was called The Belladonna—because it was good for sore eyes.

An abrupt person with a drooping mustache met us about the quarter-deck and began to mention large sums of money commencing with $4,000 a year and going on up till he bit his tongue.

We merely swallowed our palates and fell back two paces to the rear.

When the abrupt person paused for a moment at "a duplex for $14,000 a year" we turned and ran like a couple of jack rabbits on the way home to dinner.

Two blocks away we fell under the spell of a shack called the Psychedoza. A Cuban refugee met us at the door and dared us to come in.

We were offered an apartment on the eleventh floor which had never

"Cinch!" Syd gurgled brothly. "You can sell anything to the Rubes in New York."

"Rubes in New York!" Peaches and I echoed.

"Surest thing you know," Syd beamed on; "there are more Rubes in New York than in all the rural districts tied together. Who is it rides up town on the Subway in the evening with a strange man standing on each one of his insteps—the Rubes!"

Who is it pays eight dollars for a pair of seats and enables the ticket speculator to pick up bargains in real estate—the Rubes! Who is it pays sixty cents a dozen for cold storage eggs so the Grocer can send his family to a Sprudel Spa—the Rubes! ## Shepherd's Plaid Walking Suit

Designed by J. M. Gidding & Co., New York.

THE material of this modish walking suit is lightweight woolen goods, and the pattern is a small shepherd's check in green and black. The skirt is extremely full, with a suggestion of a hike in front. A border of plain green broadcloth finishes the hem of the skirt and it is cut to a scant ankle length. The trim little coat is firmly belted and flares decidedly from the waist. Green broadcloth serves to trim the collar, and novel bone buttons lend a smart detail. This suit is well planned and practical as well as stylish. It would also be modish in black and white check.

Lesson X.—Third Quarter, For

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, 1 Kings xviii, 30-39—Memory Verses, 36, 37—Golden Text, Prov. xv, 29—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Elijah had been so safely hidden by the Lord during the three years that though Ahab had searched for him everywhere, in all lands, he could not be found (verse 10). How safe are those whom the Lord hides, and all His redeemed are hid with Christ in God (Col. iii, 3; Ex. xxxiii, 22; Isa. li, 10; Zeph. ii, 3). As by the word of the Lord he was sent into hiding at Cherith and Sarepta, so by the same word he is now commanded to shew himself to Ahab (xviii, 2, 8; xviii, 1). He was indeed a man of God, God's representative, acting only for God and in His name, and, as in the resurrection of the widow's son he foreshadowed Him who is the resurrection and the life, so the words "shew thyself" remind us of Him who after His resurrection from the dead "showed Himself alive" again and again during the forty days (John xxi, 1, 4; Acts i, 3).

We are glad to meet Obadiah, whose name means "servant of Jehovah," and to see him saving the life of and caring for a hundred of the Lord's prophets (xviii, 4, 13). As we see him the governor of Ahab's house we think of Joseph in Egypt overseer of Potphar's house (Gen. xxxix, 1-6). God men are often in difficult places for the glory of God. As Obadiah and Ahab went each his way to search for grass for the horses Elijah met Obadiah and told him to tell Ahab that he was on hand (xviii, 8, 11, 14). Obadiah was at first afraid that Elijah might again disappear, but on being assured that he would surely shew himself to Ahab he went to meet Ahab and told him, and Ahab went to meet Elijah (xviii, 15, 16). Fearlessly Elijah accused Ahab of forsaking the Lord and serving Baal and ordered him to gather all Israel and the prophets of Baal to Mount Carmel, and this Ahab did, for the word of the Lord in the mouth of Elijah was with power (xviii, 17-20).

Elijah boldly demanded of the people to decide whether they would follow Jehovah or Baal and not continue hating between two opinions. But the people were dumb. Then he said that though he was but one against 450, he would suggest a test and that they should worship the God who answered by fire, and to this they agreed (21-24). He gave the prophets of Baal the first opportunity, and following his instructions they were to build an altar and cry unto their god from morning until noon, "O Baal, hear us!" But there was no answer. Elijah mocked them and urged them to cry louder, saying that he must be busy or on a journey or perhaps asleep. So they cried aloud and leaped upon the altar, and cut themselves till the blood gushed out, and kept it up till the time of the evening sacrifice. But it was all in vain, for there was no answer of any kind, and no unseen power regarded their cries (25-29).

We may wonder why the devil missed such an opportunity to honor his worshippers, for the time will come when he will send fire from heaven (Rev. xiii, 13), but he can do nothing without permission from God, and he was surely restrained this time. Now consider Elijah as he called the people to him, repaired the altar of the Lord and, taking twelve stones to represent the twelve tribes of Israel, built an altar in the name of the Lord, put the wood in order, prepared the sacrifice and drenched the whole with twelve barrels of water until the water ran about the altar and filled the trench (30-35). Listen now to Elijah talking to his God, not crying aloud nor with frenzy or demonstration of any kind, but calmly, with quietness and confidence. "Lord God of Abraham, of Isaac and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word. Hear me, O Lord, hear me, that this people may know that Thou art the Lord God and that Thou hast turned their heart back again."

How the great multitude must have listened to this simple prayer and how intently they watched this lonely man of God! We, too, have been watching him and listening to him talking to his God, the God of Israel, the only living and true God, and we behold the answer, "Then the fire of the Lord fell and consumed the burned sacrifice and the wood and the stones and the dust and licked up the water that was in the trench." How can we refrain from shouting "Jehovah, He is the God!" (Verses 36-39). And we must add: "Who is like unto Thee, O Lord, among the gods? Who is like Thee, glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders?" (Ex. xv, 11). Quickly were the prophets of Baal slain, and Elijah said to Ahab, "There is a sound of abundance of rain." Then Elijah went to the top of Carmel to pray, and it was patient, earnest, persevering prayer, for the servant went seven times to look before he saw the indication of the coming storm in the form of a cloud like a man's hand, suggestive of Elijah's hand taking hold of God (Verses 40-46; Jas. v, 18). If our aim is simply to glorify God we may safely rest upon Jer. xxxiii, 3. Consider David and Hestekiah in 1 Kings xvii, 45-47; II Kings xix, 19, and fear not to pray (Ps. cix, 21, 27).

R. P. Schwerin
On the Seamen's Bill

The American plowmen are interested in sea commerce. It is expensive and likewise humiliating to have to salute a foreign flag every time a farmer wants to ship a bushel of wheat, a bale of cotton or a pound of farm products across the ocean. The American farmer is entitled to the protection of his flag in sending his products across the sea, and Congress should give such encouragement to shipping interests as is necessary to meet foreign competition in ocean commerce. A recent bill known as the Seamen's Bill became a law under the President's signature and Mr. R. P. Schwerin, vice-president of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, when asked to define this law and outline its effect upon American steamship lines, said in part:

"The bill provides that no ship of any nationality shall be permitted to depart from any port of the United States unless she has on board a crew not less than seventy-five per centum of which, in each department thereof, is able to understand any order given by the officers of such vessel, nor unless forty per centum in the first year, forty-five per centum in the second year, fifty per centum in the third year, fifty-five per centum in the fourth year after the passage of this Act, and thereafter sixty-five per centum of her deck crew, exclusive of licensed officers and apprentices, are of a rating not less than able seamen."

"The overseas trade of the world is competitive, therefore the original cost of the ship and the operation of the ship have to be reckoned with in the keen competition of these rival nations with one another. The sailor is obedient and competent and is the cheapest sailor in the world. It is therefore manifestly clear that if this law applied to all nationalities in the trans-Pacific traffic, it would be on the same economic basis, but it works a single hardship to all the ships of the world except the Japanese and American ships, and with the latter it works two hardships. With the European, the cost of constructing a ship is no higher than the cost of constructing a Japanese ship, but if they had to provide European crews, while the Japanese operated with Japanese crews, the condition of competition would be such that they could not overcome the handicap and they would be driven off. But the American ship would have to contend not only with the tremendous increase of cost of wage in the substitution of the European crew for the Chinese crew, but also the greater initial cost of the ship. As the Japanese have now done away with their European officers and Japanese crews, all of whom speak a common language, there is no difficulty for them to comply with all the conditions of the bill and continue their Japanese crews, with Oriental wages."

"The law, therefore, instead of assisting the American ship, adds another heavy burden, while it places none whatever upon the Japanese ship, but, on the contrary, turns over to the Japanese the traffic of the Pacific Ocean, which the American ship is forced to forego by act of Congress of the United States."

DIVINE BELIEVED
COLLAPSE CERTAINLouisville Man, However, Gains Weight After Taking Tanic.

Louisville, Ky., August 31.—C. D. Divine, one of the best and most favorably known men in Louisville, who is book-keeper for the Falls City Clothing Company, recently had these words to say about Tanic, the premier preparation. "It was my misfortune to be afflicted with an aggravated case of stomach trouble and a highly nervous condition for several years. Gas would accumulate in my stomach, causing me great pain. These attacks followed one another in such rapid succession that my entire system became weakened and made me susceptible to coughs and colds. "At one time I feared I was in danger of a complete nervous breakdown. In fact, I was told that a breakdown was inevitable. I had a tired, worn-out feeling, my sleep was disturbed, I was lacking in energy, and had no appetite. I was depressed in spirits and devoid of ambition."

"I suffered for two years, the stomach trouble refusing to yield to the treatment of the best physicians in Louisville. My nerves were shattered. I felt as though my case was hopeless. "Since using Tanic, I feel like a different man. I have gained in weight, I sleep better, my appetite has returned, and I am filled with vigor and ambition. The tired feeling has vanished completely."

U. S. to Loan on Cotton.

Washington, Aug. 24.—Treasury officials Monday made public an announcement by Secretary McAdoo that in view of the action of the Allies in putting cotton on the contraband list, he would, if it became necessary, deposit $30,000,000 or more in gold in the Federal Reserve Banks at Atlanta, Dallas and Richmond for the purpose of enabling the reserve banks to rediscount loans on cotton secured by warehouse receipts made by national banks and State banks belonging to the Federal reserve system. The gold would be deposited temporarily, at least, without interest charge. It was explained that if it appeared that the object could be accomplished with greater efficiency thereby, the deposits would be made directly with national banks agreeing to lend money on cotton at a rate not to exceed six per cent.

Directors Seeking A Compromise.

A committee representing the Board of Directors of the George Alexander State Bank is reported to be interviewing the depositors of that institution presenting a proposition to pay over another 33 1/3 per cent dividend, thus making a total payment of 80 per cent in an effort to effect a compromise. This would mean a suspension of further proceedings in the case against them and also would operate as a settlement of the depositors' claims. The depositors, it is said, do not view the proposition very favorably, and some of them are said to have openly rejected the offer for compromise on the reported basis of an additional 33 1/3 per cent. To the depositor who had but a small amount at stake, the offer would present some chance of acceptance, but to the one whose deposits were up in several figures the prospect does not seem so alluring. —Bourbon News.

Which is Better—Try an Experiment or Profit by a Richmond Citizen's Experience.

Something new is an experiment. Must be proved to be as represented. The statement of a manufacturer is not convincing proof of merit. But the endorsement of friends is. Now suppose you had a bad back, a lame, weak, or aching one. Would you experiment on it? You will read of many so-called cures. Endorsed by strangers from far-away places.

It's different when the endorsement comes from home. Easy to prove local testimony. Read this Richmond case: Mrs. S. W. Parks, 132 Big Hill Ave., Richmond, says: "I had severe pains in my back and at times the action of my kidneys became irregular. I was also nervous and dizzy and mornings when I awoke I felt stiff and lame. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Middleton's Drug Store, stopped the pain and regulated the kidney action." ## Deserved Tribute to the Faithful Horse

The author of this toast to the horse is unknown, but it equals Vesit's famous tribute to the dog:

"Here's to that bundle of sentient nerves, with a heart of a woman, the eye of a gazelle, the courage of a gladiator, the docility of a slave, the proud carriage of a king and the blind obedience of a soldier; the companion of the desert plain, that turns the moist furrows in the spring in order that all the world may have abundant harvest; that furnishes the sport of Kings, that with blazing eye and distended nostril fearlessly leads our greatest Generals through carnage and renown; whose blood forms one of the ingredients that go to make the ink to which all history is written, and who finally, in black trappings, pulls the humblest of us to the newly sodded threshold of eternity."

Out of The Ordinary.

On the charge that her 71-year-old husband flirts, Mrs. Edward Dean, of Allentown, Pa., had him arrested. The woman told the mayor that Dean had been misbehaving of late, was seeking the society of young women and declined to work. Dean refused to say a word in his own behalf, declaring he preferred a cell to his wife's nagging. He was taken to jail.

A farmer, near Evansville, Ind., who tried to send a chicken through the mails made a big mistake when he sent a hen. The hen laid an egg during transit and celebrated the event as usual, by cackling, thus betraying a violation of the mailing laws. The affair has been reported to the authorities at Washington.

David Steinfeldt has resigned as dog catcher at Montclair, N. Y. He received $500 and commissions and the latter alone almost equaled the salary, but now, Steinfeldt says, nearly all the dogs and dog owners in Montclair know him and his commissions are practically nil. So long as it was only the dog owners that knew them still was profit in the job, for he could fool them with false whiskers and other disguises. Not so with the dogs. He couldn't beat their sense of smell.

Recently while the thermometer was straining itself to register the heat, May or Hugh McIndoe, of Joplin, Mo., brought himself of the 27 prisoners in jail. His first order was that an electric fan be installed to add to the comfort of the prisoners. This was tried, but did not help much owing to the crowded condition of the jail. Mayor McIndoe then tried more heroic measures and summing 23 "plain drunks" he ordered their release.

With the slogan, "American Fashions for American Beauties," a movement was inaugurated in Chicago by the D. A. R. to have a fashion center established by the Government in Washington, D. C. A committee will lobby in Congress next winter for an appropriation for a building.

Since Newport society started the fad of carrying a live bird in a dainty little "walking cage" it is spreading rapidly over the country. If a good looking woman can't attract enough attention without carrying a bird in a cage, she ought to be caged and kept off the streets.

It Always Helps

says Mrs. Sylvania Woods, of Clifton Mills, Ky., in writing of her experience with Cardui, the woman's tonic. She says further: "Before I began to use Cardui, my back and head would hurt so bad, I thought the pain would kill me. I was hardly able to do any of my housework. After taking three bottles of Cardui, I began to feel like a new woman. I soon gained 35 pounds, and now I do all my housework, as well as run a big water mill."

I wish every suffering woman would give

By PAULINE BRADFORD
MACKIE

(Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Co.)

All right Maurice Beaulieu was possessed with the certainty that Jean was lying, wounded, in the open field. He knew the lad trusted him to come, so Beaulieu tossed as a mother might and could scarcely wait for the dawn. He talked to Jean. The stars were pale.

"There, so, Jean," he reached for his boots—"so, Jean, keep up your courage."

He raised his flask and tasted of its contents:

"So, Jean, a few drops, they put heart in a man."

He stuffed a loaf of bread into his knapsack.

"Now, a crumb, Jean—so!"

He gathered up gauze and dressing for a wound and thrust it into his knapsack. "So now, Jean, let us see."

Ah-h-h, that is bad, but we'll get you well. Let me tie on this bandage. They'll do better for you at the hospital, but this will serve till we get there."

He flung his knapsack over his back.

So, Jean, put your arms around my neck. Gently, gently, I'll not let you fall. That's better, eh?" He laughed.

"The uh-lans didn't get you, Jean."

It was gray when he went down the road. People had their houses open, but the shop windows were closed. At the city gate an officer talking with a sentry recognized Maurice.

"Hello, Beaulieu!" he called. "You have been promoted for bravery."

Beaulieu nodded as a matter of course. He had fought like a demon to kill men; he must have yelled like a maniac; his throat was raw inside; he had risen to a kneeling position in the trenches to snuff a flag which had been shot away from Jean, and he had waved it high above his head to cover the retreat of his companions.

And then the uh-lans were on him again, but he was up and running with the flag, and he had escaped, somehow he had escaped. It was a miracle. He never doubted Jean's safety until the lad could not be found.

"Where are you going, Beaulieu?"

"For Jean," Beaulieu answered.

"Valles, he is missing!" the officer asked. "Have you been through the hospitals?"

"He is not in them," Beaulieu answered.

This delay tortured him. He knew he could make his search better before the sun was up, for the gleam of the bayonets had dazzled him yesterday, and from the field they would flash in his eyes today.

Beaulieu pointed. "Valles can't be far," he added. "We were right in those trenches, just back of those bushes."

"Well, go on, then," said the officer; "but be cautious. Remember the wounded have been taken off the field. You won't find him alive."

"Alive," thought Beaulieu impatiently; "no, not if this talking keeps up much longer." He saluted and burst away.

He stepped out into the field. He had known he should see the rifles and the bayonets first, but they did not flash upon his eyes now.

No, they were dull and gray like the sky. He gazed blankly into the zenith; his first instinct was to look away from the ground.

There was still a star shining; it was yellow and very faint. He met its gaze. It looked at him steadily, blinked and went out. The thought of Jean gripped him, and he forced himself to look down again over the field.

There were spots on the bushes; thin, slow streams furrowed the ground; as the light increased these sluggish trickles, these splashes, were scarlet.

This was a shambles; the world a slaughterhouse.

All the panoply of war was gone; all that made it brilliant, all that goaded him on, was gone. Why had he been promoted for bravery?

He was not brave now.

His mind was confused; he must stop; he must be clear. There was a word which would help him if he could remember it.

He pressed his hand to his forehead, struggling for that word. Ah, he had it! Sure. He must be sane.

He strode firmly forward, looking neither to the right nor to the left, his gaze on those bushes just beyond the farther trench.

He heard low moans and cries, but he did not heed them.

Something moved in a heap of bodies. How dead men struggled! He passed on. There, out on a free space of ground, a dead Belgian was lying forward on his face.

Beaulieu paused. Clutched in the man's hand was an arm. He stared. Then he saw that the man's other arm had been shot off.

His heart jumped.

Could that slender foot be Jean? He went forward and turned him over. When he saw the face of a stranger he began to laugh.

Now that the fellow did not prove to be Jean, he saw how comical it was. What did he expect to do with his arm. Run to the hospital with it to have it sewed on?

Beaulieu pursued his search, chuckling.

The east grew rosy and a sweet, cool breeze blew against him. The day promised to be fine and clear. He was glad of that.

Jean always liked to lie flat on his back in an open field, staring up at the sky with eyes that were as blue. Mme. Valles was a German, and her eyes were like her son's.

She wept because her sister had boys in the German army. Her own husband was a Belgian, and her sympathy must go with him; and Jean, her son—was he not fighting the uh-lans as well as his father?

But women took life hard.

He was sorry for women. He thought again of that fellow running off with his own arm before he collapsed. There was a saying in the Bible, "As one whom his mother comforteth." The fellow had probably started to run home to his mother. She must be proud of her big boy.

He chuckled.

He had forgotten that word which had impressed him so strongly—that word which would help him. He knew it was important, but he had forgotten it again.

He hummed a tune—a little, old, Alsatian tune—as he continued his search; the men whose faces he looked at made no impression on him; he only knew they were not Jean.

The sun flashed on the bayonets and sabers lying about; it was pretty as a sparkling sea.

He bent over a body. Some instinct made him rise and whirl about on his heel.

He was face to face with one of the uh-lans. The German was on foot. Each man was but a mirror of the other, so identical were their expressions; each had believed himself alone searching for a friend. They stared at each other; they turned; they ran in opposite directions as if pursued by demons.

The fight was out of both of them. Beaulieu dropped his rifle as he ran. Horror was on his heels. He stumbled and fell and lay as if dead, then reached slowly for his rifle.

As his hand gripped it he realized that it must be another man's, for he had dropped his own.

He sat up and looked over the field. The enemy had disappeared. He turned his head, and there beside him Jean. It was Jean's rifle he held. He rose by the smile on Jean's face that the lad was dead.

Only dead men were happy like that; that is, the right sort of dead.

He chuckled again.

men, not the kind who struggled to get back to life.

Jean's blue eyes looked straight up into the sky.

Beaulieu touched the boy's face.

It was still warm. There he knew that pale star which blinked at him and went out was a signal from Jean. He wished he could lie down beside him, but he had promised to return.

He had been promoted for bravery, this Beaulieu. Who was the fellow who had promised to get back to him. He must find Beaulieu again.

He lifted Jean on his back and started homeward. It was strange that this Beaulieu, who was the fellow who had promised to get back to him, was not the kind who struggled to get back to life.

It was a message that he must fight for them both. He was grim but exultant as he strode on. Where he had killed one man before, now he would kill two; it would be double the number always, double for Jean.

The ground was uncertain and he stumbled; then he realized he was trampling over the dead with his boots on. He laid Jean down and took off his boots, then lifted his friend again and went on in his stocking-feet.

When he came into the city again no one offered to help him, for Beaulieu was a giant in strength and he bore Jean as though he had been a girl.

He climbed the road and turned into a small hotel.

Mme. Valles sat at the table with the one guest left in the hotel; she was having an extra cup of coffee with her and they were talking about the war.

Beaulieu's figure filled the doorway and his shadow fell across the two women.

Mme. Valles raised her hands. She was going to cry out, but somehow she did not. She managed to get to a door; it opened into her bedroom.

"Put him here, Maurice. Can you get a doctor?"

Beaulieu laid Jean down on his mother's bed. He nuzzled Mme. Valles' cheek so softly in his pity.

"No, Jean does not need a doctor, Mama Valles."

He went out, closing the door on the two women. There was a stranger in the dining room, and he remembered Mme. Valles did not like curious eyes.

He sat down in the first chair he reached, exhausted.

The guest in the hotel was an American—Miss Dewey. She had expected to join friends in Berlin. She kept saying to herself that she had never expected this war when she went abroad.

When she saw Beaulieu's pallor she ran to the kitchen and called Marie, the young girl who assisted Mme. Valles as a kind of underhousekeeper, to bring hot coffee at once.

"They have brought home Mme. Valles' son dead," she exclaimed, "and I think the man who brought him is ill. He looks so white."

"Yes, mademoiselle," answered Marie. Her hand shook so she kept pouring the coffee into the saucer instead of the cup.

"Here," said Miss Dewey, "I will attend to that." She seized the coffee pot and poured the coffee with a steady hand. "Now you bring a basin of warm water to wash his feet. They are bleeding and his stockings are cut in shreds."

"Yes, mademoiselle," answered Marie. "Please tell me—where is Jean?"

"His mother has him in her room. She has shut the door. Hurry with that basin, Marie." Miss Dewey went back to Beaulieu. "Try to take a little of this coffee. It will do you good."

Beaulieu lifted his heavy eyes to her face. "Thank you."

Marie came hurrying in with towels and a basin of water and, kneeling down, peeled off the ragged stockings with tender fingers. She was young and dark and richly colored.

Suddenly she pressed Beaulieu's bare feet to her bosom, sobbing, while she murmured: "My Jean, my Jean!"

She was to have married Jean Valles in the autumn.

Beaulieu's brows contracted with pity. "Poor Marie!" he said. "Poor Marie!" His mind seemed entirely clear again.

The coffee helped him. He watched her as she sat back on her heels, letting his feet drop into her lap and looking up pitifully at him.

"Now, I shall have no husband."

He saw her poor, little, drooping mouth, the woe in her eyes.

It was more than grief for Jean. It was desolation come upon her. The issues of life were cut off. She would have no husband, no children. Why was she left a woman?

This was what war did for women! Beaulieu spoke with difficulty, for his throat was dried. "Marie, if I live I will return and be your husband."

When she saw the kindness on his face she bent forward and laid her face against his breast, sobbing. He patted her shoulder until she grew quiet. Then he said: "Now, I must be going."

Miss Dewey was crying, too. She ran out to get him another cup of coffee. "What a good man," she thought.

Marie knelt and dried his feet and put a pair of clean stockings on him. They were Papa Valles', as were also the boots, she brought. Papa Valles had some to his wife, too; and he was a big man like Beaulieu, not slight like Jean. Jean was so pretty—like a girl. Her tears fell more gently.

Beaulieu pulled on the boots. He was an awkward hands with Miss Dewey. "Good-by," he said. "When you return to your own country remember us."

She stood on the steps of the hotel, while Marie followed him to the road. "Wait," he said; "I was forgetting something."

He thrust his hand into his pocket and drew forth a big key and gave it to Marie. "It is the key to my shop. If I do come back all is yours."

She took it as a child might. "Yes," she kept her eyes fixed wistfully on Beaulieu's face.

"Good-by," he said, and bent to kiss her cheek; then suddenly drew her to his arms and kissed her mouth. "Good-by, my wife!"

The blood coursed freely through his veins once more. That kiss—so fresh, so sweet—had revived him. It was as though Marie had become a stranger, a woman whom he had fallen in love at first sight.

Their love sprang new born from this moment; it had no past. He went off down the road with a swinging gait, his shoulders squared. The good God meant well by man. His hand must be over this somehow—yes, over it all.

"Where is his shop, Marie?" asked Miss Dewey.

"The fourth one down on that side, mademoiselle," answered Marie.

"Oh, that beautiful lace shop!" Miss Dewey exclaimed. "There are some wonderful rose-pieces in the window. I notice them the first day I was in town. So he is a lace-maker?"

"Yes, mademoiselle."

Beaulieu reached the top of the hill. He turned and waved his cap. The uh-lans were down the hill.

"He is gone," said Marie. She clasped her hands on her breast.

"Think, mademoiselle, how one hour can bring me two sorrows. It is war!"

"Where is his shop, Marie?" asked Miss Dewey.

"The fourth one down on that side, mademoiselle," answered Marie.
